Venue:

Alma Mater Studiorum - University of Bologna

Palazzina della Viola, Via Filippo Re, 4 - 40126 Bologna (BO), Italy

The central part of Palazzina della Viola was built toward the end of the 15th century by Annibale Bentivoglio to make it a place of delight for his family. It was used for different purposes until 1803 when Napoleon's government allocated it to the School of Agriculture of the University, headed by Filippo Re. Today, the Palazzina della Viola houses the offices of the UNIBO International Relations Division.
